Re: Mravicich Residential

To whom it may concern:

I have worked with Pablo on several residential projects over the last few years. These have included three highly detailed homes, as well as several incidental projects. I am currently in the process of establishing an agreement with Pablo to complete a project involving the construction of new office premises for an architectural practice in which I am a director. My reason for trusting Pablo with this work represents the respect I have for him both ethically and professionally.

My experience through working with Pablo has proven him to be a conscientious contractor who strives to achieve the best result for all parties. Pablo surrounds himself with a team of builders that are more akin to family, and maintains strong links with specialist consultants whom may be called on if required.

Pablo is more than competent and understands not only the construction aspect of his profession, but also that the relationship between different parties plays a major role in the success of the project. This includes liaising with all consultants, council, and client.

I look forward to working with Pablo on many future projects, and believe he would be an asset to any construction project.

Yours sincerely,
